Remarks by new JAST president Taku Hirabayashi

We recently announced JAST VISION 2035, the new long-term vision of the JAST Group. This vision defines the type of organization we want to be for our next 50 years with progress backed by the identity we established during our first 50 years. Rapid changes in critical social issues make the outlook uncertain. Our goal is to use an understanding of these issues with all our stakeholders as the basis for initiatives that make us a company that plays a vital role in society.

During the first 52 years, JAST has grown under the leadership of the company's founder Takeaki Hirabayashi. I am now assuming leadership at a time I regard as our second founding. I pledge to carry on the value creation philosophy of "embracing new changes while preserving the core characteristics that define us." I want to build an even stronger foundation for sustained growth and higher corporate value. I will focus my energy on achieving our goals and meeting the expectations of our stakeholders. Thank you for your support and guidance.

Remarks by new JAST chairman Takeaki Hirabayashi

JAST has been a pioneer in the computer sector for more than 50 years since its inception on March 26, 1973. Over the years, JAST has established a prominent position in the IT industry and been a source of new value that makes society better. We have operated with absolutely no restrictions as a completely independent IT solution provider with no affiliations with any other corporate group. Our group's key strengths are our accomplishments, knowledge and technologies resulting from taking on challenges in a broad range of industries and technologies.

Establishing a corporate philosophy to be the type of organization we want to be has been a priority. JAST has a corporate culture that enables people to grow while enjoying their work as well as their lives. I believe that the resulting power of our people is the greatest strength of the JAST Group. Everyone at our group has the same goals. Furthermore, everyone is well aware of the critical need to adapt to changes. This is a major reason for our ability to grow consistently even as our business climate became increasingly uncertain.

We will continue to embrace spirit that has guided us since our founding regardless of how the world changes. We will always be committed to helping solve social issues for the benefit of society and people. Thank you for your support for the JAST Group as we look forward to even greater accomplishments.
